

KOREA TODAY FORMALLY TAKEN OVER BY JAPAN

Imperial Edict and Military Order Were Elements of Change—Russia Knew of Japan's Big "Freeze out" Game

TOKIO, Aug. 29.—By imperial edict and military order, Korea was today formally annexed to Japan. Outwardly the change was made without a slip in the Nipponese diplomatic machinery, but unofficially it is rumored that revolt is threatened in Korea.

America enjoys, under Korean treaties, many privileges that Japanese treaties refuse.

The situation is a gigantic "freeze out" game, with Japan dealing the cards, and Russia playing into Japan's hand. England and Russia today notified foreign ministers of their full recognition of Japan's move. Russia especially assured Japan of her hearty co-operation, and promised that the Czar's officials would use every effort to keep the Koreans in good order in Northern Manchuria and Siberia, where hundreds of discontented Koreans took residence pending the decision on the revolt question.

It is acknowledged that Russia was acquainted with every detail of Japan's plans regarding Korea at the time of the Russian-Japanese convention.

LU CHUAN LIN'S DEATH
UNFORTUNATE FOR CHINA
PEKING, Aug. 29.—The death of Lu Chuan Lin, Chinese grand councillor, one of the most powerful cabinet members, is regarded as particularly ill luck for China just now. Lin, though past 70, was foremost in suppressing China's indignation over the Mikado's encroachments. It is feared that his death will result in placing a less moderate, conservative councillor in power.

EUCALYPTUS GROVE BLAZED

Hard Fighting Stopped Flames
After Seven Acres Had Been Burned Over

Hard fighting saved fire from running over the whole of the big 100-acre eucalyptus grove at Berrydale last Saturday afternoon. Sheriff Lacy was called out, there being a suspicion that the fire had been started by someone seeking to destroy the grove. Nothing was found to carry out the theory.

The sheriff took off his coat and with other men formed a fighting line that put out the fire after about seven acres had been burned over. A nearby house was threatened with the fire.

MASKED THUGS ROB FRISCO STREET CAR

Motorman Fatally Beaten—
Robbers Escape with $150
and Leave No Clue

San Francisco, Aug. 29.—Three masked and armed men held up and robbed the crew and passengers of the Mission street car, inbound, on the city outskirts, before daylight.

The motorman, B. C. Reimer, resisted and in the attack was fatally beaten. The conductor and three passengers were beaten unconscious. The thugs robbed them of $150 and escaped without leaving the slightest clue.

Motorman Reimer was running the car at a fair speed from Hillcrest on the Mission road when he was signalled to stop. As he slowed up he noticed the man wore a mask and instantly threw on the power. The bandit jumped aboard as the car leaped forward. "Stop the car and throw your hands up," the bandit ordered. As the car came to a standstill two other bandits boarded it and covered Conductor West, Passengers F. Vanhorn, D. F. Daley and J. Coleman. Reimer resisted, when the bandit searched him and tried to assist the others, but the motorman was beaten unconscious with revolvers.

After robbing the unconscious men the robbers stood over the victims until West and Vanhorn regained their senses. Under orders from the robbers, West turned on the current and started the car for town at full speed, the robbers jumping off.

The victims notified the police as soon as possible, but the mounted men found no traces of the robbers.

The True Economics of Fire Insurance

Among the out-of-town people in Santa Ana on business last Saturday was Mr. J. H. Richards of Los Angeles. Mr. Richards is the general manager of the Los Angeles Fire Insurance Co., and spent the greater part of the day getting acquainted with the Orange County stockholders of his company and incidentally made an arrangement with B. E. Tarver, of Montgomery & Tarver, to look after the interests of the Los Angeles Fire Insurance company in Santa Ana and surrounding country.

Mr. Richards is a man of about 50 years of age, and his life work since his school days has been fire insurance. He comes highly recommended by the Aetna Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

Speaking of insurance matters in general Mr. Richards expressed surprise and regret that California, usually so loyal to local institutions, should not have carried her insurance in home companies from the first instead of sending millions to eastern states and foreign countries, and giving them the immense profit with which to pay dividends. "But Southern California has finally come to," said Mr. Richards, "and within the past year has organized and financed a good strong fire insurance company. Capital for investment has poured in from Fresno, Cal., to Phoenix, Arizona, and the company is now doing business, and we are proud to say, managed entirely by directors chosen from among California men, while the stock is owned by people of all conditions of life, living in Southern California.

"The drain on the finances of the state amounts to $16,000,000 per annum for fire insurance alone; and, as shown by examination of the statistics, the amount returned for losses is but the trifling sum of 15½ cents for each dollar of premiums paid."

The Los Angeles Fire Insurance Co. is being financed by the Federal Finance Co., a million dollar corporation, which is the holding company for the Los Angeles Fire Insurance company. The statement is made by Mr. Earl D. Gray, the local representative of the latter company, that there are over forty resident stockholders in this much-needed institution in Orange county alone.

CRIPPEN WAS FORMALLY CHARGED TODAY

Held for Murder of Wife—
Miss Leneve Was Detained
as Accessory

CROWD TRIED TO RUSH GUARDS WITH CRIPPEN

Miss Leneve Talks to Father—
Dew Has Evidence of Intended Suicide

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Dr. Crippen had planned suicide, according to Inspector Dew's testimony before Magistrate Marshall, at Crippen's and Miss Leneve's preliminary hearing today.

Dew said that when Crippen was arrested aboard the steamer Montrose at Father Point, a note was found on him, written to Miss Leneve on a business card. The note read: "I cannot stand the horror through which I have gone every night, any longer. I have made up my mind to jump overboard tonight. I see nothing ahead of us. My money is gone. I know I have spoiled your life, and hope some day you will forgive me." Crippen was arrested that day, and when "tonight" came he was in the law's clutches.

On the homeward voyage Thursday, aboard the Megantic, Crippen begged Dew to permit him to see Miss Leneve.

"I may never see her again," Crippen said. "She has been my only comfort in three years."

At today's hearing Crippen was formally charged with his wife's murder. The prosecution announced that it would proceed against Miss Leneve only as an accessory, being convinced that the woman knew nothing about the murder until after it was committed. Miss Leneve is charged also with assisting, maintaining and harboring a fugitive from justice. After the formal presentation of the evidence the prisoners were remanded to jail until Sept. 6, when they will be asked to plead. As they were escorted from the courtroom a great throng tried to rush the guards.

After returning to jail Miss Leneve refused to see her father unless he promised to speak on casual subjects only, not referring to Dr. Crippen. She refused to be questioned regarding her relations with Crippen. Finally her father consented, and saw his daughter only a few minutes.

In the matter of intended suicide on the Montrose Inspector Dew has also produced evidence that Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve contemplated a double suicide. He produced a scrap of paper, on which Crippen wrote: "Shall we wait until 10 or 11 tonight?" This is supposed to have been written when Crippen wrote his farewell message to Miss Leneve.

DENVER, Aug. 29.—A salute of 21 guns boomed as Colonel Roosevelt arrived in Denver. The welcome was general. He was the guest at a "Chuck wagon dinner," given by the Denver Press club at noon.

This afternoon he addressed briefly the special session of the Colorado legislature. Tonight he is to be the guest of honor of the live stock men.

Roosevelt spoke briefly at the "Chuck wagon dinner" and discussed conditions of thirty years ago, when he rode the range. He paid a tribute to the range men, saying:

About a week ago Tapp went to San Fernando. He cleaned an old 45-caliber revolver and was in the act of loading it when the revolver was discharged. The bullet struck the young man in the right breast and penetrated the lung. Tapp lived about two hours. He stated that he did not know just how the revolver happened to be discharged.

MAYOR GAYNOR NOW AT HIS OWN HOME

"Out of Doctors' Hands"—
Gallagher Thanks God His Victim is Out of Danger

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Mayor Gaynor was declared "out of the doctors' hands" last night at his home in St. James, L. I., to which he had been removed from the Hoboken hospital during the day. When Dr. Parrish left Mr. Gaynor at 4 o'clock in the afternoon to return to New York, his only attendant outside of the family was Luke Clark, the male nurse, who has been at his bedside since the shooting.

Mayor Gaynor still finds difficulty in speaking plainly. It was explained that no attempt had been made to remove the bullet by an operation today.

"Thank God, my prayer is answered," exclaimed James J. Gallagher in his cell in the county jail, Jersey City, last night, when he heard that Mayor Gaynor had been taken home.

The remains were brought here, arriving this morning, and the funeral was held this afternoon. Tapp was a private in Company L, Seventh regiment, N. G. C., of this city. His death is the first death in Company L since 1898, in which year three members of the company died while the company was in the Spanish war service.

A sergeant and six privates in uniform, detailed by Captain Ulm, met the remains of Private Tapp at the train and escorted the body to the chapel of S. W. Smith & Son, where the funeral services were held this afternoon. At the grave taps were blown and a salute for the dead was fired.

WILLIAMS ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE

Republican Convention Closed Harmoniously--Six Delegates Elected To The State Convention

The Republican County convention adjourned Saturday afternoon, after E. E. Keech of Santa Ana, T. B. Talbert of Huntington Beach, E. C. Hitchcock of Fullerton, Lew H. Wallace of Newport Beach, Samuel Jernigan of Orange, and G. W. Moore of Westminster had been elected delegates to the State convention, and after a new county central committee had been chosen, with R. Y. Williams chairman, and N. A. Ulm, secretary. Following the appointment of committees by the chairman, Dr. C. D. Ball, at which point the report of the convention as given in Saturday's Register, closed, a number of addresses were made, among them Clyde Bishop, W. B. Williams, J. C. Burke, J. C. Metzgar, T. A. Winbigler, R. P. Mitchell and W. M. Scott. All other nominees for county offices were called for, but none other was present.

Resolutions.

A summary of the resolutions passed follows:

1. We reaffirm our allegiance to the cardinal principles and policies of the party.
2. A revision of the tariff would only tend to unsettle business conditions, and California fruit interests are now splendidly protected, and we are opposed to further tariff revision until the tariff investigating committee reports.
3. We give our thanks to the California delegation for its work in the tariff, and especially do we thank United States Senator Flint and Congressman Smith.
4. We endorse the direct primary law. We object to the cumbersome features, and urge the legislature to revise it. We denounce the practice of members of one party registering under another party. The spirit of the law should be accepted by all men.
5. We endorse the good roads movement in Orange county.
6. We reaffirm our faith in the ultimate development of Newport harbor, and urge upon this county the necessity of opening the entrance for lighter craft, after which we may expect government aid.
7. We advocate the conservation of the natural resources of the state.
8. We endorse the administration of that wise statesman, William H. Taft.
9. We endorse the Republican nominees from governor to constable.

1. We point with pride to the freedom of our country and municipal governments from corporate influence, and welcome any system through which practices of corporate control in the state may be thwarted and overcome.

11. Our legislative candidate shall be at liberty to vote for such a candidate for United States Senator who shall be in favor of the preservation of the present tariff until the Tariff Commission reports. If all candidates are in favor of this, then our legislative candidate shall vote for the candidate who got the highest vote at the primaries in this county.

When Chairman Wallace of the resolutions committee had finished reading the report, A. H. Stutsman of Tustin, arose and stated that he believed there should be a resolution endorsing the administration of Governor Gillett, R. Y. Williams for the committee accepted the resolution, and it was adopted by the convention with the report.

"I have here a resolution that I was requested to offer," said Stutsman, and he read a resolution to the effect that, whereas, delays of the law on technical and other grounds have aroused public complaint, therefore the convention pledges its candidate to assist to his utmost in the next legislature in securing more speedy and certain procedure in criminal cases.

Delegates Chosen.

Orange county's portion of delegates to the State convention is six. It was decided to elect a delegate from each supervisorial district and one at large. The delegations from the supervisorial districts met in different parts of the hall. Chairmen of the district meetings were: First, John Cubbon; second, Simon Chaffee; third, J. S. Howard; fourth, A. H. Bibber; fifth, W. W. Wilson. In the first both men nominated, E. E. Keech and J. P. Baumgartner have been affiliated with the Good Government League, and there was no "regular" candidate out. Keech was elected.

In the second district there was no opponent to T. B. Talbert considered a regular.

In the third district there was a close and interesting fight for delegate between E. C. Hitchcock of Fullerton, regular, and H. V. Weisel of Anaheim, Lincoln-Roosevelt Leaguer. The vote stood: Hitchcock 31, Weisel 30.

A sidelight of this contest was furnished in statements made after the convention to the effect that a proxy given the Lincoln-Roosevelt Leaguers was turned over to a man to be voted by him with the league. This vote went to Hitchcock, which in the close fight turned the result.

In District 4 Jernigan and Campbell were nominated, and Jernigan (regular) won, 26 to 13.

In District 5 Lew H. Wallace, Good Government man, defeated J. O. Forster (regular) by 14 to 12.

A. C. Black of Santa Ana, nominated G. W. Moore as delegate at large and Moore was elected without opposition. Moore is a Good Government League man.

Central Committee.

After 50 cents was collected from each delegate to pay the expenses of the convention the convention adjourned, and Secretary Ulm called the central committeemen, just elected, together.

Many expected that there would be a fight between Dr. Ball and R. Y. Williams for the chairmanship. Williams was nominated by H. H. Hossler. L. H. Wallace was nominated but declined. Dr. Ball was nominated. He made a short speech withdrawing in favor of Williams, and Williams was elected by acclamation. Ulm was elected secretary by an unanimous vote.

On the new central committee are: Anaheim No. 1—F. C. Spencer. Anaheim No. 2—Charles Bowlan. Bay City—J. H. Hocking. Bolsa—J. H. Wertz. Buena Park—George Wilcox. Delhi—M. Babylon. El Modena—J. F. MARNA'S MISTAKE

It Didn't Stand In the Way of a Happy Wedding.

By MARTHA MC-WILLIAMS.

"You old poke! Take that for being so horribly late!" a girl's voice said as Trevor went along a overgrown patch to reach his uncle's house. With the words came a handful of rose petals, crumpled, damp and deliciously fragrant. It had rained all day, clearing just before sundown. The rain had kept him prisoner at the inn three miles away. He had meant to reach Briarlaw early in the morning instead of thus upon the edge of dusk. The rain had sent the creek all out of its banks. Thus he was coming to his journey's end afoot rather than behind his prancing blacks. The footbridge defied the flood. That for carriages was swinging perilously in the rushing water. He could not rest until he had seen his uncle. Something had to be settled out of hand—something vital to his whole future.

He looked about him. The dusking greenery betrayed no human presence, but the mocking voice went on: "You're a fine fellow! Upon my word, if you had kept me waiting five minutes longer I should have marched straight back and said to my pastors and masters, 'Please, sirs I'm good now—quite ready to marry Mr. John Trevor!'"

"Oh, I say! Hold on! You—you must be Miss Lee—Marna—of whom I've heard, and I'm John Trevor," that gentleman interrupted, his face scarlet. The shrubbery at the right trembled violently; then out of it burst the very prettiest girl he had ever seen, who said, her eyes blazing: "And you have come here to marry me! Well, I can tell you now I had rather die than be your wife!"

"Let's shake hands," John said jovially. "It appears we're in exactly the same boat. I have got to see my Uncle John and be off, because the dearest girl in the world will be whisked away to Europe, clean out of reach, unless I can manage to marry her all in a wink."

"Oh, how jolly!" Marna cried, giving him both her hands. "If you'll only run away I can wait and have a church wedding, with bridesmaids and flower girls and everything. It would be horrible to miss them, but there seemed nothing else to do, so Billy Martin and I have everything all ready. Come! We won't wait for him any longer. I dare say he is water bound, but he ought to have swum the creek, considering. Don't you think so?"

"Undoubtedly. I am sure he doesn't deserve you, letting such a little thing hinder him," Trevor said, still holding her hands. "You mistook me for him, so we must look a little bit alike. But I disown the likeness. You would not have had to wait for me, not if the stars had fallen."

"Ahem! Suppose that other girl heard you now," Marna said wickedly, her lids lowered, a naive smile lurking about her lips. John pressed her hand and drew it upon his arm, saying only: "Keep close to me. The path is narrow, and I mustn't let you get wet." But Marna appeared to feel sufficiently answered. She smiled more winsomely than ever at him and said as they came out in the clear lawn, "Cousin John—we are cousins, you know; your uncle is my stepfather as well as guardian—will you do something for my asking and not misunderstand?"

"Certainly," Trevor said, smiling himself. Marna was silent for three breaths, then said hurriedly: "Don't say anything about anything until morning. Poor Papa Trevor doesn't sleep well at the best of times. He has been worrying all day about your delayed arrival, and if you let him know the upsetting of his most cherished plans he won't get a wink tonight and will be crosser than two bears tomorrow." "Does he know about Billy Martin?" Trevor demanded. Marna looked at him, amazed.

"Oh, dear, no!" she said. "If he had known, why, I shouldn't have been out there waiting. Papa Trevor has a habit of having his own way."

"It's a family trait," Trevor interrupted, stealing an arm about Marna and kissing her cheek. She brushed away the caress as though it were some slight annoying insect and went on: "He couldn't have known, because, you see, I did not really know myself until yesterday after your telegram came. Then—well, it was any port in a storm with me. I don't really, truly care about Billy, but I do love my own way as well as though my name were Trevor!"

"I see. But was Billy Hobson's choice?" Trevor interrupted wickedly. Marna frowned at him, saying: "The idea! Now you are horrid. I have a dozen beaux, but it happened Billy was the only one right on the spot. And you'll admit there wasn't much time for planning when Papa Trevor shouted out to me: 'Marna, telephone for the rector and the wedding cake day after tomorrow. Is there anything else needed?' John gets here in the morning, and you had better go to packing your trunks. I mean he shall take you abroad. There you'll have a chance of getting fairly acquainted with each other."

"H'm! That was a close call. Did you pack?" Trevor asked, his eyes twinkling. Marna tossed her head the least bit as she answered: "Of course; packed everything, just as if I knew I was going to die. Mamma would have trouble enough over my going without having that on her hands. Besides, there are such loads of pretty things. Papa Trevor has been a real fairy godfather ever since he took a notion to marry us off this way. I knew if he didn't see them he wouldn't remember them. Mamma was safe to send the trunks after me. But if he did see them he'd most likely make a bonfire of them, and that would be too bad for anything."

"Quite too bad. You made me feel utterly conscience stricken. I didn't dream his heart was so set on this plan," Trevor said. After a minute he burst out hotly: "But he has only himself to blame. He wouldn't let us meet. This used to be my home, and he has kept me in exile all the seven years since he married your mother. He has brought me up to regard myself as his son and heir, and now unless I marry whom he chooses I am to lose everything."

"You seem to think it would have been a case of 'I came, saw, conquered,'" Marna said, her eyes dancing. Trevor turned suddenly upon her. "If you could put up with a Billy Martin for the sake of your own way, I don't think you would be quite flint to me," he said almost angrily. He truly loved his uncle. He was, moreover, proud of his name and the consequence attaching to the big Trevor fortune. It hurt to have this adorable Marna flout him when he was thus at grips with hard fate. She was adorable; so adorable, in spite of fealty to the other girl, it gave a sharper edge to his perception of loss.

"Indeed, you are right. I might have chosen you if it had been made a matter of choice," Marna said pensively, her head a little aside. They were nearing the open hall door, through which there shot suddenly a broad stream of white light. It fell full upon them, throwing them up strongly against the background of leafy darkness. Somebody upon the piazza shouted with joy at sight of them. Under cover of the shouting Marna said, by this time plaintive, "If only it was not for that other girl, but I always play fair."

"So you've outwitted me, you young villain!" John Trevor, Sr., said, wringing his nephew's hand. "I never meant you to see that pretty baggage there until I was ready to give her to you for good and all. You know your way about. Trot along. You'll find your room exactly as you left it when you went away a boy."

"Let me be still a boy for this one night, Uncle Jack," Trevor pleaded, keeping hold of a tremendous elderly hand. Papa Trevor wagged his head, saying: "Aye, aye, lad! But remember you must wake up, ready to play a man's part."

Trevor slept badly and woke late to find the world full of sunshine and singing birds, to hear his uncle shouting impatiently at the men mowing the lawn and across the blurred noises, high and clear, the silver tinkle of Marna's laughter. He went downstairs like one in a dream. There was a hideous black cloud over all the morning brightness. As he came out on the steps a messenger on a bicycle halted there and handed him a yellow envelope, saying apologetically, "Shure, sorr, we tried to git ye this bit the night, but the divil was in the water; besides, the b'ye that writ it out sid the news would kape."

Mechanically Trevor opened it and read: I sail today. Marry Paul in London. He did not deceive me. His fortune does not depend on anybody's whim. No longer yours. MARY.

Just then Marna danced up to him, her hands full of dewy roses. He caught both her wrists and said huskily: "Marna, you mistook me for Billy Martin. Can't you do it again long enough to marry me?"

For a minute Marna did not answer. She looked down, her breast heaving, her cheeks rivaling the richest among her roses, and said at last, shyly lifting her eyes: "You are not quite accurate, Cousin John. The fact is, Billy was my mistake."

Of course they were married, as Papa Trevor had ordained. They lived happy ever after, but they did not go abroad until they themselves chose.

In Cold Storage.

A cold storage room on board a steamer is a valuable adjunct to the housekeeping department, but no passenger would prefer such an apartment to his stateroom. Robert Woolward in "Nigh Sixty Years at Sea" tells of the experience of a ship's butcher which nearly ended in a tragedy.

The meat from the ice room was taken out about 9:30 in the morning by the steward and the butcher. One morning they had a difference of opinion. The butcher was inside the room, and the steward shut the door on him and locked it. Then he forgot all about him.

About 3:30 in the afternoon the butcher was wanted and could not be found. A general hunt was made, and, not being successful, the ship's company decided that the missing man had gone overboard. Suddenly the steward recollected, and cried: "I left him in the ice room this morning."

The butcher was taken out unconscious. A little longer stay would have been fatal. He had been nearly six hours in the intense cold and in a place nearly air tight.

The steward left the ship at the next port.

Self Dependence.

Depend on yourself. A knowledge of how to swim is better than to expect somebody will be at hand to throw you a life preserver in case of accident.

Notes On My European Trip

(By C. A. Gustlin)

ARTICLE III: ITALY AND HOME AGAIN.

The next winter I decided I wanted a change of climate, that would resemble the good old California variety, so I decided to go to Florence, Italy. On my way there I visited the fascinating medieval towns of Nuremberg and Rothenburg. Everyone visiting Germany should certainly see these two places. Then I went to Munich, where the splendid art galleries commanded most of my attention. From there I enjoyed the ride through the Tyrolean Alps, and took the wonderfully charming trip on the most beautiful of all the Italian lakes, Lake Garda. The delight I felt on arriving in this sunny, happy, care-free country, was inexpressible, excepting as I fairly burst out like a freed bird, into song. What a change from life in Berlin, with its oppressive military spirit, the persecutions of the police, the hard and fast rulings of an officer-ridden city! The Prussian gruffness, the pessimistic, disgruntled, suspicious bearing, were all absent, and instead were these happy peasants, innocent children of nature. All the charm of people and landscape was there, of which the greatest bards have sung. A few hours were spent in Old Verona, whose chief attraction is the ancient amphitheater. At last I reached Florence, that wonderful repository of art treasures, lying peacefully in the valley of the Arno, that city of picturesque street scenes. The six months spent there are now almost as a dream to me. The magnificent view of Fiesole and other surrounding heights, the city itself with its cathedral and church domes, the azure skies and wonderful sunrises, all seem to me now as some past vision. My room was in one of the old palaces that, like many others, has been remodeled into apartments. My next door neighbor was the ex-queen of Saxony, who deserted her king, children and throne to marry a tutor, and who later married an Italian pianist. She has been banished from the Saxon court.

By a most fortunate combination of circumstances I became associated with one of Europe's most prominent and successful voice masters, Signor Braggiotti. They were, indeed, the rarest privileges that I enjoyed in the beautiful home of this remarkable man and his delightful family. Both he and his wife have enjoyed the advantages of the best culture, education and travel that wealth could afford. Madame Braggiotti is the daughter of Sebastian B. Schlesinger, a man of prominence in European and American financial circles, and also a musician of note. He has always been interested in music and musicians, and has composed many lovely German, French and English songs. The beautiful Braggiotti Villa on the heights of Montughi, is the Mecca for all artists and cultured people who visit Florence. In the center of the villa is a fine music hall, seating five hundred persons. Here are given many charming musicales, not only by Madame Braggiotti and the pupils, but by such artists as Jean de Reske, Martin, Ancona, and many others of equal fame. Often these celebrities were guests for weeks at the villa, and in this way I learned to know intimately many noted people. Harold Bauer, Gottfried Galston and his wife, and Buonamici, were among the great pianists whom I met while there. From these I learned many things regarding conditions which face the concert pianist today, which are very different from what they should be.

As a young man, Signor Braggiotti spent many years in America; therefore, unlike most of the Italian teachers, he is acquainted with the American voice, the American temperament and the American constitution. I have heard him say that it would be far better, in most cases, for the American vocal students to remain in America and study with the American teachers, of whom there are many excellent ones, than to come abroad and risk the tragic experiences that many meet with at the hands of unprincipled and incompetent "professors." And so is the same true in all lines of musical work. It is a most dangerous thing nowadays for the music student to go abroad to study. There are hundreds of charlatans in the profession, and the commercial aspect of the situation is appalling. The antiquated idea that one must go abroad to finish one's musical education is all fol-de-rol. There is, in fact, no finishing of education of any sort. The average music student, however, who studies abroad, does get properly "finished" by the average European "professor."

I do not say there are not certain advantages accruing from an experience of musical life abroad. There are. Principal among these is the advantage of getting into immediate touch with the different people, their life, customs and traditions. One can interpret German music more truly after knowing more of the German character, ideals and history. So it is with the Italian and French music; one gets the spirit of the folk that their art embodies. Then the advantages of the language study there are very considerable. One gets the true accent, the true idiom and turn of phrase. I spent much time in the study of German, French and Italian, and strived, especially, to master them from the standpoint of pronunciation and diction. This work I had plenty of opportunity to apply in my experience of coaching singers. I was particularly engaged in this work during my association with Madame Mackenzie Wood and the Braggiottis.

Also, the stimulus that comes from being thrown together with other striving students and with people who appreciate and understand the best music is great. But all this is present with us, in our larger cities and in conservatory centers. We are rapidly getting a "musical atmosphere" in our cities, if one means by that, active public interest in the art, many concerts, orchestras, operas, choral societies, clubs, conservatories, etc. It is inspiring to go over to Europe and get a bird's eye view of the situation, and see, in its true light, the marvelous musical progress and artistic growth of our own wonderful country. Conditions here compare wonderfully favorably with anything one can find in Europe, and oftentimes excel in an incredible degree. The greatest singers in Europe are Americans; they are sought everywhere. After they have made their successes there they are brought here and paid enormous salaries. Europe cannot afford to keep them. America has the money, and this almost always claims the best in all lines. Art follows commerce; many of the greatest teachers in Europe are either Americans or people who have long lived in America. The latter realize that the old idea of going to Europe to "finish" his musical education is still in the mind of the American student, so they go abroad to reap what share they can of the American dollars transformed into marks. But we are getting wiser with age. I thoroughly believe that the time is not very far distant when the European student will be seeking American shores for musical ideas and education, just as he is now doing for such in many other lines.

There is a deplorable reign of technique abroad. This has always been the death of real art. Technique seems everywhere to be exalted as an end, not a means. The man who could perform the most astounding acrobatic feats on the key-board seemed to be, in the minds of most students, the hero of the hour. Soul, expression and spirit were too often disregarded. This, of course, cannot endure. This reminds me of a man whom I met abroad, Herr R. M. Breithaupt, a musician of great prominence in Berlin, who has written what is, without doubt, the finest treatise on piano technique ever written; it is called "Die naturliche Klaviertechnik," and is published only in German.

There is much else regarding music student life abroad that I would like to write about, much of vastly greater importance than I have yet touched upon. I refer to the absolutely demoralizing atmosphere of many of Europe's music centers. What tragedies are enacted there! What insidious dangers lurk in the path of every student! Only a residence abroad can fully reveal them.

What a delight it was to step once more on free American soil, to breathe the freedom of American air, to sense the spirit of energy and progressiveness that permeates our whole life, to, above all, read character, strong, fearless, idealistic and optimistic in American faces! No one can ever know what a genuine inspiration it was to me to experience all this as it all unfolded itself to my view on going about in New York City, on July 17th, when I landed, after nearly three years of life in backward-looking Europe.

We have a great present, and shall have a far greater future in art life, which stands for the expression of man's noblest ideals and conceptions. The European does not realize this. How utterly distorted, in fact, are his opinions and ideas of us! He scarcely knows our geographical location. America to him stands for dollars, greed and graft. But the truth shall be known, and known not only to European, but to American. Let us awaken to a realization of the vast talent and ability that lies dormant in the American nature; determine to cultivate it and develop it at home, and nourish and care for that higher, real, ideal self that finds its heaven in the esthetic, artistic realms of the beautiful.

The following by Henry Van Dyke, so thoroughly voices my own sentiments that I consider it a most fitting close to these random thoughts to which I have given very inadequate expression:

Home Thoughts From Europe

Oh, it's home again, and home again, America for me!
My heart is turning home again to God's country.
To the land of youth and freedom, beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunshine, and the flag is full of stars.

It is good to see the Old World and travel up and down,
Among the famous countries and cities of renown.
To admire the crumbly castles, and the monuments and kings;
But soon or late you have enough of antiquated things.

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air;
And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair;
And it's sweet to loaf in Venice, and it's great to study Rome,
But when it comes to living, there is no place like home.

I like the German fir-woods, in green battalions drilled,
I like the gardens of Versailles with flashing fountains filled;
But, oh, to take your hand, my dear, and ramble for a day
In the friendly Western Woodlands, where Nature has her way!

Oh, Europe is a fine place, yet something seems to lack,
The past is too much with her, and the people looking back;
But life is in the present, and the future must be free;
We love our land for what she is and what she is to be.

So it's home again and Home again, America for me!
My heart is turning home again to God's country,

A SOLID FRONT

The results of the Republican county convention Saturday are eminently satisfactory from a party point of view. There was a sharp contest of the chairmanship, which was won by Dr. C. D. Ball who ran on a "Get-Together" platform. In introducing him his opponent, Judge J. S. Howard of Anaheim, led the applause. Thereafter not a note of inharmonious was heard. G. W. Moore of Westminster was elected delegate at large, without a contest.

While both of these successful candidates are "progressives," their election means nothing in a factional sense so far as the present campaign is concerned.

Every speech made, every resolution adopted, every committee appointed—in short the entire proceedings of the convention point to united and enthusiastic support of the entire republican ticket at the November election.

So mote it be!

THE TEMPTATION OF THEODORE BELL

The crucial test of character is the ability to "swear to one's own hurt and change not." Can Theodore Bell stand that test? Thousands of voters are asking this in their hearts. Four years ago Bell made a campaign only less brilliant than that just made by Hiram Johnson and upon a similar issue. He came near to winning, but, running against Hiram Johnson on that issue, Theodore Bell will have no chance of winning. There are not Democratic votes enough in California to elect anybody to anything. Bell's only hope lies in a division in the ranks of the Republican party. Had Cury or Anderson been nominated by the Republicans nothing that Johnson or the Lincoln-Roosevelt Republican League could have done to hold their followers to party lines would have prevented tens of thousands of them breaking out of the reservation and voting for Bell. Was that Bell's only chance?

In the congressional election of 1902, the Political Bureau of the Southern Pacific Company came to the rescue of Bell's fight, very likely without Bell's knowledge, with $2500 and all the influence it could muster, but it was not that the bureau cared for, or had any hold upon, Bell. The Herrin machine wished to defeat Frank L. Coombs, who had proven independent, and did it. Will that bureau pursue the same policy this time? Not alone to punish Hiram Johnson, for Bell, too, has been obstreperous, but that Republican insurgency may be punished! From out of the East come persistent rumors that Republican "regulars" prefer to see Democrats rather than insurgents elected. Do California "regulars" feel so, too?

This paper does not believe that Theodore Bell can be caved down that bank. He has seen supervisory so empty a gubernatorial office of honor as to leave behind no trace of reputation that would be accorded precedence outside of a political tenderloin. Our belief is that Bell will stand in the future, as he has stood in the past, for a free Democratic party and a free state. He will make his battle more in the hope of re-creating the Democratic party than of being made governor of California.

But this affords no assurance that the Southern Pacific's Political Bureau may not throw its strength to Theodore Bell. There is an able bodied fight ahead of progressive Republicanism in this state and it is not impossible that party lines may be as nearly obliterated in the November election as they were in the August primaries. When the Men of California see the line-up they will know how to vote without being told and the line-up will be made clear before the campaign will have waxed a month old.—California Weekly.

LET THE WOMEN HAVE A SAY

Of each hundred pupils in the normal schools of California ninety odd are young women. Of each hundred teachers in the public schools of California ninety-nine are women. But on the boards of trustees of the normal schools of California there is not one woman. Does that seem to be quite a square deal? There are business interests connected with the normal schools with which men may be supposed to be best equipped to deal, but there are social values there for the gauging of which the intuitive genius of women may be more safely relied on. The case of Van Liew emphasizes this truth. Had there been two women on the board of trustees of the Cater normal they would have long since gotten to the bottom of that situation. Had there been any miscellaneous hugging going on it would have come to their knowledge. If there had not been, if the principal of that school had been made the victim of a put-up job, those women trustees would have learned that too. Had there been anything at all whole-some in that atmosphere their offices would have scented it. The California Weekly makes bold to suggest that two out of the five in the directorate of each of the normal schools in this state be women. If the other trustees, the men principals and teachers in the normal schools, object to this then we favor filling three of the places on each board with representative women of California. As to material to select from the club life of California has developed an embarrassment of riches. To accomplish this our governors will have to forego politics, but that will hurt neither the schools, the state, nor the governors.—California Weekly.

THE STEEPLE JACK.

He Must Conquer Many Difficulties in His Dangerous Work.

The successful steeple jack must possess determination, perseverance and ingenuity. He must solve many a practical problem in hoisting great bodies aloft. He must know how to fasten a hook over the summit of a skyscraping chimney. He must have the nerve to paint a steeple that sways like a pendulum at the slender top. He must be able to tear down, build up, gild, paint, place electric wires and do many another task that would be difficult enough on the solid earth.

There are many ways of getting up on a steeple, and when all others fail the man will tie a rope around it and then, with a coil on his back, walk round and round it until the entire steeple is covered with rope, and in such case he has probably been round it fully 300 times.

But a steeple is not the most difficult height to climb. Straight, tall chimneys are the hardest of all. There a man has to work with might and main to lift himself inch by inch from the ground to the top. Sometimes the top is 300 feet high. When it is reached a hook is placed over the edge, a pulley is made fast, the swinging chair is hauled up and work begins.

When the chair is near the top it is easier to work, because the ropes are short, but when they lengthen as the ground is approached there is a tendency to swing, and the wind gives impetus.

The steeple jack's safety depends upon the hook, and until he has raised himself almost to the top it is impossible for him to see whether or not the hook has been properly adjusted. More than once a steeple climber has seen when within ten feet of the top that corrosion of the iron and the collection of soot have so thickened the wall that the hook is merely balancing on the top, so that the slightest pull in the wrong direction would drag it off. Again, the bricks are often loose at the top, and the hook is likely to tear them away.

One of the natural difficulties to conquer is the swaying of all high steeples and chimneys. In a gale a steeple point will sway a foot and a half. Usually it sways from seven to nine inches. Painting it means reaching for a spot on the right side, and finding it on the left, and when making a dive for it on the left, to see it sway back to the right. Yet in spite of the constant danger a born steeple jack exults in his work and is at home, like the ironworker on the skyscraper, only when high above the world. He can stand triumphantly at any height, if he can have two and one-half square inches to bear his weight.—Harper's Weekly.

MERCIFUL CAESAR.

A Story of the Great Roman and a Band of Pirates.

Caesar traveled with the retinue of a man of rank, and on his way to Rhodes he fell in with an adventure which may be something more than legend. When he was crossing the Aegean, his vessel is said to have been taken by pirates. They carried him to Pharmacusa, an island off the Carian coast, which was then in their possession, and there he was detained for six weeks with three of his attendants, while the rest of his servants were sent to the nearest Roman station to raise his ransom.

The pirates treated him with politeness. He joined in their sports, played games with them, looked into their habits and amused himself with them as well as he could, frankly telling them at the same time that they would be hanged.

The ransom, a very large one, about $10,000, was brought and paid, Caesar was set upon the mainland, near Miletus, where, without a moment's delay, he collected some armed vessels, returned to the island, seized the whole crew while they were dividing their plunder and took them away to Pergamus, the seat of government in the Asiatic province, where they were convicted and crucified. Clemency was not a Roman characteristic. It was therefore noted with some surprise that Caesar interceded to mitigate the severity of the punishment. The poor wretches were strangled before they were stretched on the crosses and were spared the prolongation of their torture.—James Anthony Froude.

Making It Plain.

"Popper," said little Willie Billups, "what does the paper mean when it says that when it comes to getting next to the people, Colonel Blinks has all the other candidates lashed to the mast?"

"That is the slang way of saying, my son," returned Billups, "that for keeping his eye peeled old man Blinks has his opponents skinned a mile."

"There are people in this world for whom the English language is not good enough when they come to the expression of what few ideas they have in their mental garages."—Harper's Weekly.

Highly Efficacious.

"George is not naturally a hasty man, and as his position requires great patience and capacity for waiting, he took a regular training course in both."

"How did he do it?"

"He always went with his wife shopping to match things."—Baltimore American.

THE REGISTER'S NEWS FORUM

A Plea For Improvement.

To the Santa Ana Daily Register:
Mr. Editor, Dear Sir—I am a temporary resident of Santa Ana. I have been here off and on for several years, and can speak in the highest terms of the people. I have known personally and otherwise. A more friendly, kindly, generous people it would be difficult to find outside of Santa Ana. Nevertheless there are a few things in your city that would impress strangers very unfavorably.

My permanent home is in Los Angeles, where the streets are sprinkled daily and kept free of weeds and other unsightly objects. My home for the present is in Santa Ana, on Sycamore street, between Church street and Tenth, "Blind Alley," so-called, I am told, because it is not seen, for instance, by the man who drives the sprinkling wagon. There may be some excuse for him, however, as he does the sprinkling at night, and he may not see the street very well, although he does carry a headlight.

Then it is probably not seen by a few of the property owners on Main street, whose back yards face on this sadly neglected section of your city.

It was my privilege last summer to visit some of my friends in the east. My praises of Southern California were profuse, especially of Los Angeles and Santa Ana. These friends have received picture postcards of the court house and grounds, city hall, the public library, and other attractive views of picturesque Santa Ana. Two of the same easterners from beautiful Northfield, Mass., are expecting to start on the 5th of September for a three months' sojourn in Sunny California, dividing the time chiefly between this place and Los Angeles. Their first stop will be in Santa Ana. They will probably arrive after dark, so their first view of this lovely town, on looking out in the morning, will be across a shockingly dusty street, into the unsightly back yards of fine residences facing on Main street. Their first exclamation will be: "Well, is this your beautiful Santa Ana you have told us so much about, or are we still on the desert in the midst of sage brush. What terrible dust! Why do they not sprinkle the street? Is this a sample of your fine town? Guess we had better wipe the dust of Santa Ana off our feet and hie us away to Los Angeles."

What apologizes can be made for this condition of things? Only four short blocks from the heart of the city, in plain sight of Fourth street. It has been, and still is an unanswered question, "Why are these disgusting blemishes allowed to remain year after year?" The street could at least be sprinkled and the ugly weeds cut down. It certainly would be only dire necessity that would compel one to live in the midst of surroundings so undesirable. And yet as to locations, access to schools, churches, court house, library, electric cars, etc., most desirable. Where is the public spirit and pride of the citizens of Santa Ana to let this eyesore remain to their discredit and the condemnation of all who behold it?

Yours respectfully,

Conservatory Corner

C. A. GUSTLIN

Yesterday we were in Long Beach. We were there just ten years ago, too, but what a change!

Long Beach always was after the best, and is now evidently, for one of its foremost public-spirited men tried to persuade us to transfer our Conservatory of Music operations from Santa Ana to his town.

We thanked him for the compliment, told him we were supremely satisfied with our present outlook, and invited him to come to us.

Why be selfish or provincial about this thing? Why limit it to Orange county? We know of several persons in Los Angeles, Long Beach and thereabouts who want to come to us for study. Put out the glad hand to them!

How often such an institution as we are starting in our little city has been started in other little cities, and with the right kind of support, has become a world-famous institution.

That's just what we want here. Work with us to accomplish it. Santa Ana is the city of Southern California for it!

Keep thinking about those conservatory advantages till tomorrow. Office Hervey Block, Phone Main 214.

Family Reunion

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McKenzie, 1218 South Main street, was yesterday the scene of a pleasant family reunion, twenty-five being present. The party included the host and hostess, their daughter, Mrs. Fred Carpenter, and two children, of Florence, Arizona, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover and three children, from Long Beach, their son, Robert from Garden Grove, Mr. and Mrs. William McKenzie and two children, from Flower street, Santa Ana, Mrs. Comer and three children, and Mrs. Stewart and three children.

After a generously provided noon dinner, the entire family was grouped and photographed by Artist Leonard.

BEN TARVER'S DEAL

IN FIRE INSURANCE

B. E. Tarver, of the law firm of Montgomery & Tarver, has arranged to represent the Los Angeles Fire Insurance Co. in Orange county. He will write insurance and sell the stock of the company.

Mr. Tarver said today: "I went into this because I think the company is a good one, both for insurance and investment, and because I want to do something to keep so much money from going out of Orange county and California to Eastern and foreign insurance companies. If Orange county capital is invested in this company the dividends earned will stay in Orange county, and all insurance premiums paid will stay in California. The company will lend money in Orange county, too, which will be a big individual advantage to borrowers and a general gain for the community."

TALKED OF ODD FELLOW DAY AT NEWPORT HARBOR

Newport News: C. W. Sheats and Ransom Reid were here from Santa Ana Wednesday feeling public sentiment on the proposition of having a Newport Day during the grand encampment of the Odd Fellows, which convenes in that city just before the Carnival of Products. Mr. Sheats said there would be at least a thousand of the members of the order in Santa Ana and he wanted Newport Beach to feed and entertain them on one day to be set apart, preferably Tuesday, October 4th. He stated that Long Beach had offered concessions to bring Odd Fellows there for one day, but it is unlikely that the proposition of feeding the crowd will be considered here, owing to the great expense and lack of suitable accommodations.

ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE OPENED THIS MORNING

The annual Clearance Sale of Ira Chandler & Son, which is a regular feature of this firm's business policy, opened this morning. A half-page advertisement in the Register on Friday and Saturday of last week gave the advance notice of the sale, and also a partial index to the prices that will prevail. Greater inducements are offered during this sale than in their clearance sales of previous years, as it is the experience of this firm that every article sold at a low price is the best kind of an advertisement.

In every department goods have been marked down and a saving can be made on the purchase of any article of furniture in the store; also on rugs and carpets, lace curtains, etc., of which they carry the largest stock in the city.

The sale started today bids fair to be the most successful they have ever held, as the inducements in the way of values are what attract buyers, and in this sale a special effort is being made to give the limit in values.

HORSE ON RAMPAGE ON FIFTH STREET

A horse belonging to Jasper Leck of Tustin, created considerable excitement on Fifth street Saturday. The horse, hitched to a buggy, was being led to water at the trough back of the opera house when he became frightened, jerked the bridle off and ran. At the corner of Fifth and Main he ran up on the sidewalk and knocked off a piece of a sign in front of the Basket Grocery. At the corner of Fifth and Sycamore the animal fell and slid, and was caught as he was getting up. The horse was badly skinned and a shaft was broken.

A QUEER UNIVERSITY.

Cairo Has the World's Oldest Educational Institution.

"When we think of Harvard or Yale, the former dating from 1638 and the latter from 1701, we think of them as old universities," says a writer in the American Educational Review; "but when we pass to the other side of the world we discover that even the oldest American universities are in reality very young institutions."

"The oldest educational institution in the world is the University of El Ashar, Cairo, founded in the year 683 by the great Saladin. It is the central seat of learning for the whole Mohammedan world, as well as a fountain of spiritual life. It occupies an ancient mosque in the Arab quarter of Cairo, surrounded by a confusing maze of narrow streets where the population is made up of representatives of every race that follows the prophet."

"The old mosque covers several acres and consists of a series of courts surrounded by long cloisters with low roofs supported by forests of columns. The floors of red tiles are covered daily by a multitude of men and boys, squatting in semicircles around their teachers, who sit with their backs to the columns lecturing in monotonous."

"The chancellor of the university is always a descendant of the prophet and is usually a man of ability and learning. He occupies apartments in El Ashar and is not only the supreme educational but the ecclesiastical head of the church of Egypt."

"There is no organization similar to that in modern universities. Any reputable man who desires to teach can obtain the privilege by application and is assigned a column where he may sit and impart the truth as he thinks proper. His fame or ability will attract more or less students and disciples, who pay him fees according to their means."

THE SCOLD'S BRIDLE.

Brutal Punishment to Which Women Were Once Subjected.

The brank, or scold's bridle, or gossip's bridle, was neither more nor less than a muzzle. It was in general use in Great Britain from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century, and in Scotland as well women were muzzled for certain offenses, some at least of them more imaginary than real. The instrument of torture, even a dog's leather muzzle, is uncomfortable. How much more the scold's muzzle! It consisted, according to a high authority, Mr. W. Jewitt, of a kind of crown or frame-work of iron, which was locked upon the head, and it was armed in front with a gag, a plate or a sharp cutting knife or point, which was placed in the poor woman's mouth so as to prevent her moving her tongue, or it was so placed that if she did move it or attempt to speak it was cut in a most frightful manner. With this cage upon her head and with the gag firmly pressed and locked against her tongue the miserable creature, whose sole offending perhaps was that she raised her voice in defense of her social rights against a brutal and besotted husband or had spoken honest truth of some one high in office in her town, was paraded through the streets, led by a chain by the hand of a bellman, the beadle or the constable or chained to the pillory, the whipping post or market cross, to be subjected to every conceivable insult and degradation, without even the power left her of asking for mercy or of promising amendment for the future, and when the punishment was over she was turned out from the town hall or the place where the brutal punishment had been inflicted, maimed, disfigured, bleeding, faint and degraded, to be the subject of comment and jeering among her neighbors.—London Family Herald.

Colors of the Stars.

Although there is no relation apparent between the two phenomena, yet it is interesting to recall the fact that among the stars certain colors appear to characterize different stages of change, or evolution. Red stars, according to the testimony of the spectroscopic, differ widely in their constitution from white or yellow ones, and it has been thought that varying colors may give a clue to progressive changes in the heavenly bodies. Sirius, for instance, is said to have changed from red to white, and some have suspected that Arcturus is fading from red toward yellow.

A Fairly Good Appetite.

Kaffirs, North American Indians and the fat boy in "Pickwick" may well be quoted as fearful examples of voracity, but even their gastronomic feats are exceeded by the full grown Eskimo, who will daily eat twenty pounds of flesh and oil if he has the chance, while on the authority of Admiral Saricheff a Yakut of Siberia has been known to consume in twenty-four hours "the hind quarter of a large ox, twenty pounds of fat and a quantity of melted butter for his drink."

To Be Avoided.

"There's Wilson! Let us turn back. I've no desire to meet that fellow again! Last week I asked him to lend me five pounds."

"Well, he certainly might have done so; he has plenty of money."

"Yes, I know—and he did lend me the five!"—London Mail.

A Strategist.

"That fellow is a greater strategist than Napoleon ever was."

"As to how?"

"He got a two dollar raise of salary a year ago and hasn't told his wife about it yet."—Pittsburg Post.

SANTA ANA RIFLE CLUB ENTERS COMPETITION IN PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE

The members of the Santa Ana Rifle Club are today engaged in making scores for the Pacific Coast Rifle League competition.

The local rifle club, considered one of the best on the coast, is in competition with the Spokane Rifle Club, the Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club and the Southern California Rifles in the shoot held today. The scores made by the Santa Anans today will also stand for shoots that should have been held on July 31 and August 14, which shoots were not entered by the Santa Ana Club, which was not at that time a member of the Coast League.

The conditions of the contest, as sent to G. L. Martin, secretary of the local club, are:

"Six high men to count, any number to shoot. Any rifle is allowable, but the same rifle to be used for all three ranges. Ranges 200, 300 and 500 yards. Ten shots with two sighters at each range. Regular 8-inch bulls at 200 and 300 and 20-inch at 500 yards."

When the scores are completed the results will be telegraphed to the different clubs in the league.

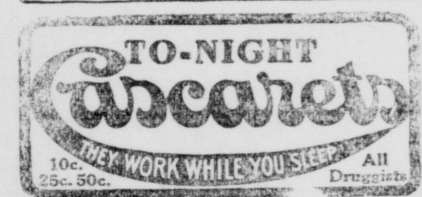

The Santa Anans will shoot against Tacoma on September 12 and against Seattle on September 26. The Coast League competition will continue over a long period, and a cup is to be awarded to the winner.

The Santa Ana Rifle Club has come rapidly to the front among marksmanship clubs on the coast, and that it can maintain a high position in the fastest company there is on the coast has been shown by the high average of scores made in all the shoots that the club has held. The men have shown consistent performances. The practice work has developed a number of indifferent marksmen into excellent shots. The work of the club is of the kind that appeals to sportsmen. Members may be added at any time, and the invitation of the club is out for the addition of new men. The conditions under which one may join the club and secure one of the latest army Springfield rifles may be learned on inquiry from the secretary, G. L. Martin; the president, John A. McFadden, or the range officer, Will McFadden, or any member of the club.

John Waters, J. R. Wilson and R. P. Wilson. Refreshments of home-made nougat and hot peanuts were enjoyed by the guests during the ride.

A merry party of young people enjoyed the hospitality of the Town company a few evenings ago with a moonlight picnic in the caves at Rocky Point. The evening was ideal, the moon being at the full and those who were fortunate to be present all report a most enjoyable time. The party included: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Munger, Jr., of Los Angeles; Miss Smith of Bakersfield, Miss Brown of Los Angeles, Miss Bessie Knapp and Miss Ruby Bledsoe of San Bernardino, the Misses Desmond of San Bernardino, Bessie Jones of Long Beach, Miss Marlar of Highlands, Miss Lindenberg of Paris, Miss Ingersoll of San Bernardino, Miss Collins of Los Angeles, May Longwell of Los Angeles, and Messrs. Waters, Wilson, Towler, McIntosh, Bayley and Norton.

EMMETT H. WILSON WILL DEFEND CLARENCE MINER

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 25.—Emmett H. Wilson, assistant city attorney, has telegraphed here, stating that he was attorney for Clarence B. Miner, a Los Angeles broker who disappeared several days ago leaving bad checks behind him.

Attorney Wilson is spending his vacation in New York. His telegram did not state that Miner is in New York or that he had seen Miner. It merely explained that he (Wilson) was Miner's attorney, that he would return to Los Angeles on September 5 and that he thought an amicable settlement of the missing broker's entanglement could be made.

THREE TRAIN MEN PERISH IN WRECK —THREE INJURED

EASY VICTORY FOR THE OLIVE PLAYERS

Santa Ana Team Lost Yesterday's Game By a Score of 10 to 0

Olive 10, Santa Ana 0.

The above figures tell the story of one of the poorest exhibitions of the national game ever seen upon the local ground, and most of the Santa Ana boys were the chief offenders.

"Rummy" Dubois was in the box for the locals and pitched a good game of ball, allowing but four hits and getting about twelve of them by the strikeout method. But the poor support of his teammates was the cause of the one-sided score.

The Olive boys gave their man almost perfect support, and he being able to keep his hits scattered, had the locals well in hand at all times.

As to the result of the game, it was never in doubt at all. The locals were never in the least danger of winning. The Coast League:

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Olive	10 0 0 0 3 0 0 0 2 0—10

GALE BLOWS BOATS ON SCOTLAND COAST

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The destroyer "Success" and torpedo boat "Thirteen" were blown ashore in a gale off Scotland. The crews of both vessels were rescued. Word was received today that the "Success" would probably be saved but there was no hope for the "Thirteen."

—More bushels per acre. It is not only the number of acres, but the number of bushels per acre that counts. A perfect seed bed and the grain planted evenly at the required depth are needed for the best results. A Van Brunt Disc Drill will do the business. J. C. Williams & Son, Agents, Orange.

TESTING FIRE CLAY.

The Most Practical Method Is to Literally Eat It.

Fire clay has been in use for centuries, and yet I believe the industry is one which lacks definite laws more than any other, including those which are either modern or ancient and of less prominence. You can go to a manufacturer of steel and specify what you want by actual figures or statements and you can check the product by chemical analysis or mechanical tests and thus make sure you get what you need. The producer knows how to combine certain elements and what quantities of various kinds to combine in order to get a result at least very closely approaching what you call for, but not so in the fire clay business. In the past the most skilled and highest salaried chemists have been employed to make tests, to promote and carry through investigations on the natural product and to study the workings of certain manufactured and elaborated articles derived therefrom. The result has been, generally speaking, confusion worse confounded. Two professors, working at similar times on brick or clay obtained from the same source and manufactured under exactly equal conditions, have recorded diametrically opposed conclusions! The same scientists at different periods have reached vastly varying conclusions when testing identical qualities and shapes of bricks, so can you wonder if a prominent fire clay manufacturer should exclaim, as I heard one on an occasion after having the above experience, "All tests of fire clay are empirical, and I would sooner trust our superintendent to pick and select his clays in the old fashioned way than pay a high fee for a highbrow's recommendations?" The chief method of testing fire clay by a practical man is literally to eat it. He can detect grit and sand best by that method, and a good fire clay (free from silica, quartzite or flint clay) is free from grit. His only other personal test is by experiment.—Engineering Magazine.

A CHINESE BANQUET.

Culinary Mysteries That Bewildered an Englishwoman.

One moment we were eating ducks' eggs whose blackened, lime flavored whites indicated that their age was unimpeachable; the next we were grappling with sea weeds, macaroni and the slippery sharks' fins that eluded our clumsily manipulated sticks. Now we tackled—not without fear—unknown meats and vegetables cooked in sugar, fresh shrimps, mushrooms from Mongolia, young bamboo sprouts, pigeons' eggs and a hundred different foreign tasting messes. Then clean plates were given to us, and bowls of sickly pink sirup, sweet potato and Indian corn cakes of dusky hue were set before each one. These were only crevice fillers and concluded the first and lighter portion of the repast. Now came the real substantial meal, wherein every dish had an accompaniment of smaller ones, containing gravies, etc., in which to dip the morsel taken from the central bowl.

There was stewed duck cooked without salt, roast sucking pig, forcemeat balls and chicken; there were soups of birds' nest, of mushroom, of vegetables and of sea slugs. There was grilled fresh water fish, which, according to custom, was helped from the top side only, for the Chinese remembers his servant. And, finally, at the conclusion the inevitable small bowl of rice and rice water was set before each person.

After some three hours, with a feeling of thankfulness that all was over, pipes, cigarettes and tea were served, and it seemed to me that the delicious aroma which rose from the latter soothed our senses and almost dispelled the antipathy that had been growing on us for all things Chinese.—Mary Moore in London Express.

The Kind Needed.

"Dear me," said the first young woman, taking her initial lesson in golf, "what shall I do now? This ball is in a hole!"

"Well, let me see," said her companion, rapidly turning the leaves of a book of instructions. "I presume you will have to take a stick of the right shape to get it out."

"Oh, yes; of course," was the somewhat cynical reply. "Well, see if you can find one shaped like a dustpan and brush."—New York Tribune.

Kissing in Iceland.

Among old time laws against kissing those of Iceland appear to have been the most severe. Banishment was the penalty laid down for kissing another man's wife, either with or without her consent. The same punishment was enforced for kissing an unmarried woman against her will; if it could be proved that she had consented to be kissed the offender was still liable to a fine of a great quantity of cloth for each offense.

A Startling Reply.

An English country bookseller sent to London for a copy of a book called "Happy Husbands." The work was out of print, but the wholesale agent certainly might have intimated the fact differently. He replied that "There are no 'Happy Husbands' in London."—London Tit-Bits.

Best Intentions.

MARS HAS CHARMED LIFE IN THE ETHER

Biplane Collapsed at Sandy Hook—Aviator Safely Jumped From Wreckage

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Aviator Mars leaped from a falling aeroplane into the sea near Sandy Hook, from a height of three hundred yards. His machine became unmanageable, collapsed, and fell. Mars narrowly escaped being struck by the wreckage in the sea. He was driving a Curtiss biplane when the motor failed, and was driven out to sea by a high wind.

He ascended at Sheepshead Bay at 7 o'clock this morning, intending to fly to Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton. He crossed Coney Island at a height of 500 feet and went over the ocean. When the motor was disabled the wind blew him from his course in the direction of Sandy Hook. Mars was uninjured.

French Aviator Fell 50 Feet
HAVRE, France, Aug. 27.—Aviator Le Gagneux, flying this afternoon on the aviation field here, struck the grand stand and was thrown to the ground. He fell fifty feet and is probably fatally injured.

GOMPERS FEELS VERY HOPEFUL

Declares Pulpit Platform and Press is Favoring Unionism

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Samuel Gompers, in a Labor Day edition of The Federationist, says:

"I believe I can read in the composite voice of the pulpit, press and platform, the fact that the people's sentiment has turned towards the necessity of recognizing unionism." Referring to the contempt cases in the Federal court against Gompers, Morrison and Mitchell, he says:

"Whoever sees in this matter that men's rights are being menaced by the undue extension of rights claimed for property, and that the courts are justly limited in their powers by the constitution, will also readily see that the case is no mere petty defiance of the courts by labor agitators, but is one that concerns the future of every citizen's rights under the republic."

Have You Ever Said: "I don't see how all the Magazines live?"—

Undoubtedly you have. Probably you have often stood before some news stand and wondered what magazines to buy. There are a lot of magazines. Most of them are mighty good and most of them live because they are good.

But there's one magazine that not only lives but GROWS. There are fifteen or more good reasons for this in every issue. These reasons are its "unbeatable" features—the special articles obtained at enormous cost—the best fiction in the world—and its powerful, sincere editorial purpose.

The September number for example: Every feature is a big one. It is actually stuffed with big, vital news—information that you ought to have, articles that explain things, stories that every member of your family will read with intense delight. Here are some of the extra good things:

Splendid Fiction. Stories—fine ones—by Arthur Stringer, Alice Brown, Mary Heaton Vorse, George Fitch and John Fleming Wilson.

"The Tooth Tinkers"—An account by Roy L. McCardell of "Painless Parkers" and their swindles.

"The Czar of Footwear"—Startling facts—all brand new—about the Shoe Machinery Trust, by Judson C. Welliver.

"In Reno Riotous"—A great story of the Johnson-Jeffries fight, by Harris Merton Lyon, filled with personality, crowded with local color, and illustrated just right.

The magazine that not only lives but grows is the magazine that is giving to the country "Peary's Own Story," a $50,000 feature; it is the magazine that is publishing the first English translation in America of M. Rostand's world famous drama "Chantecler." It is "the Best Magazine in America" and it is called

LOS ANGELES PRODUCE MARKET

Reports of the Colorado apple crop are at hand. They have been coming in fragmentarily in the past two weeks, and a final total of them has now been obtained. The crop to be shipped will amount to 3900 cars. 3000 cars will come from two districts, the one in direct connection with Los Angeles. The towns which are to supply a good part of the Colorado apples for this section are Canon City, Rockyford, Fowler and Manzanola. There are 1000 cars in sight from these places. The other producing section comprises the orchards around Grand Junction, Palis and Clifton. There are about three times as many apples grown in the central part of this state, and they are already supplying Los Angeles. It is expected nearly 1000 cars of apples will be handled in this city from the Watsonville district. Some Oregon apples are also shipped here. The total number of cars will run about 100 from the northern state, according to present estimates.

Receipts of eggs yesterday were 156 cases. Storage packed were in best call. There were a number of offers of small premiums on best select storage stocks. No changes in locals were reported.

Butter arrivals were 16,104 pounds. There was a good normal call for the commodity in all of its various grades. A little eastern stock was reported in.

Arrivals of cheese were 6308 pounds. Northern fresh and cream brick were the best sellers. Offerings in other lines were rather light.

The potato market was firm. Receipts of Salinas were a trifle heavier than the day previous, and the demand was good. Arrivals totaled 1981 sacks.

There were no onion receipts and a featureless market. Bean arrivals were thirty-four sacks. Pinks were freely offered at $5.50 on the little old stock still remaining, but buyers even at that figure were hard to find.

Sweet potato arrivals were 232 sacks. Some of the sweets sold below 2 cents a pound.

Apple arrivals were 798 boxes. No changes were reported in any varieties.

An advance in the price of honey was reported. Extracted water white is up to 9 1/2 cents on the best. Same grade comb honey is quoted at 18.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Elephant Sleep.

A man who had the privilege of passing the night among the cages of a menagerie gives an interesting description of what an elephant looks like when asleep. It is, he says, the strangest sight he ever saw. Its great legs are bent into right angles at the knees, its trunk is curled into its mouth, and the whole body looks like a shapeless mound of mud or a half inflated balloon.

There is absolutely nothing about it to suggest life. There is not the slightest movement in any part of the big bulk, nor is any part distinguishable in the faint light. The two ends of the body are exactly alike. The ears lie perfectly flat, and the eyes are concealed in wrinkles of the flesh.

Only by the sense of hearing can one tell that the mass has life, for somewhere out of it comes a hissing sound like steam from an exhaust pipe. This sound continues for several seconds and then stops, to be repeated after an interval, but the interval is so long that the repetition of the sound does not seem like breathing. —Chicago News.

The Mariner's Compass.

The compass was invented by the Chinese nearly 4,000 years ago, but it was not introduced into Europe until about the middle of the twelfth century. At that time Marco Polo, who had spent many years in Asia, returned to Italy, bringing the little guide with him. At first the compass was used only on land, but later its greatest use was to the mariners. The essential part of the compass is a magnetized needle balanced freely on a fine point fastened to the center of a circular card marked N. S. E. W. to show the cardinal points. The mariner's compass is inclosed in a brass box which is suspended by gimbals, so that the box may remain horizontal. The needle of a compass always points north, although the compass may be in any horizontal position. The reason for this is that the earth is a great magnet, having its poles north and south, and attracts all smaller magnets. The earth's north magnetic pole is many miles from the real north pole.

JUGGLED BY BEAR

A Boy's Remarkable Adventure With a Pet Bear.

WHIRLED ABOUT LIKE A TOY.

After the Unique Performance Was Over Seventy-six Stitches in the Lad's Scalp and Rolls of Surgical Plaster on His Shins Saved His Life.

Ben was a pet black bear four years old and as good natured and friendly as if his ancestors had never had bad reputations. There is only one occasion on record, says his owner, Mr. William H. Wright, in his biography of Ben in "Black Bear," when even to appearances did Ben misbehave himself.

The circumstances being examined, however, the animal came off with his good name virtually untouched. Ben had been left in his shed as usual. Later in the day a crowd was seen about the door. I hurried home to find most of the women of the neighborhood wringing their hands and calling down all kinds of trouble on my head.

At first I could make neither head nor tail of the clamor, but finally gathered that that bloodthirsty, savage and unspeakable bear of mine had killed a boy, and upon asking to see the victim I was told that the remains had been taken to a neighbor's house and a doctor summoned.

This was pretty serious news; but, knowing that whatever had happened Ben had not taken the offensive with out ample cause, I unchained him and put him in the cellar of my house, well out of harm's way, before looking further into the matter. Then I went over to the temporary morgue and found the corpse—it was one of the Urlin boys—sitting up on the kitchen floor, holding a sort of impromptu reception and, with the exception of Ben, the least excited of any one concerned.

I could not help admiring the youngster's pluck, for he was an awful sight. From his feet to his knees his legs were lacerated, and his clothing was torn to shreds, and the top of his head—redder by far than ever nature had intended—was covered with blood. As soon as I laid eyes on him I guessed what had happened.

It developed that the two Urlin boys had broken open the door of the shed and gone in to wrestle with the bear. Ben was willing, as he always was, and a lively match was soon on, whereupon, seeing that the bear did not harm the two already in the room, another of the boys joined in the scuffle. Then one of them got on the bear's back.

This was a new one on Ben, but he took kindly to the idea and was soon galloping round the little room with his rider. Then another boy climbed on, and Ben carried the two of them at the same mad pace. Then the third boy got aboard, and round they all went, much to the delight of themselves and their cheering audience in the doorway.

But even Ben's muscles of steel had their limit of endurance, and after a few circles of the room with the three riders he suddenly stopped and rolled over on his back.

And now an amazing thing happened. Of the three boys suddenly tumbled helter skelter from their seats one happened to fall upon the upturned jaws of the bear, and Ben, who for years had juggled rope balls, cord sticks and miniature logs, instantly undertook to give an exhibition with his new implement.

Gathering the badly frightened boy into position, the bear set him whirling. His clothing from his shoe tops to his knees was soon ripped to shreds and his legs torn and bleeding. His scalp was lacerated by the sharp claws until the blood came. His cries rose to shrieks and sank again to moans. But the bear, unmoved, kept up the perfect rhythm of his strokes.

Finally the terrified lookers-on in the doorway, realizing that something had to be done if their leader was not to be twirled to death before their eyes, tore a rail from the fence and with a few pokes in Ben's side induced him to drop the boy, who was then dragged out apparently more dead than alive.

The doctor took seventy-six stitches in the lad's scalp and put rolls of surgical plaster on his shins. So square and true had Ben juggled him that not a scratch was found on his face or on any part of his body between the top of his head and his knees. He eventually came out of the hospital no worse for his ordeal, but I doubt if he ever again undertook to ride a bear.

How She Won Out.

"Oh, George," she cried in perplexed tones. "I'm afraid we must part."

"Part! Why must we part, dear?" he echoed.

"On account of father," she replied. "He fears we would be mismatched. We are so very different, he says."

"In what way are we so different?" he asked, with a show of dignity. "Well, father says I am of such a ready and willing disposition, while you seem so—so backward, so reluctant and hesitating, so—so loath to come to the—the point, don't you know?"

"He does, does he?" blustered George, bracing up, and the very next afternoon she was showing her girl friends how stunning it looked on the third finger of her left hand. —Boston Herald.
